Anyone looking to work in sports must learn to be comfortable with being uncomfortable. The industry is fast-paced and demanding, making it unlikely that you'll ever have a set routine. Constant learning and self-improvement are essential—that's just part of the job. Before coming to Marist, I had little experience with video production or editing, but going out of my way and seeking answers to those questions set me on the path to success. Everyone is different in how they learn, but Marist and the sports communication program are so good at adapting to the needs of each student. The community that we built during my time as a student is something I will always hold close to me. I implore those looking to work at any of the big networks to get involved with everything you can! Being able to see and experience all avenues the sports world has to offer is just another perk of being a Marist student.

Marist provided me with unparalleled opportunities to grow academically and professionally. The encouragement I received from faculty and career services allowed me to explore my passion for technology beyond the classroom—whether it was presenting my research at a student conference in Chicago, attending an international cybersecurity conference in Spain, or completing independent research projects tailored to my interests. Marist also played a pivotal role in launching my career, as both my junior year internship and full-time job after graduation stemmed from on-campus career events. I'm incredibly grateful for the experiences and connections that shaped my journey, and I know the foundation I built here will continue to serve me well.

“ My time at Marist equipped me with the practical skills, confidence, and opportunities to land my dream job after graduation. Only through Marist could I have had the opportunity to spend a summer interning in the New York State Capitol and a semester studying and interning in Washington, D.C.—experiences that were pivotal in shaping my professional journey. Marist’s expansive experiential learning opportunities gave me the edge I needed to break into a competitive field and turn my aspirations into reality.

“ Throughout my time at Marist, I developed confidence in my career-readiness. I had the opportunity to complete internships, formulate independent research projects, and volunteer in the community, all attributable to an education tailored to my interests. Marist helped me not only leverage my education to thrive in the modern accounting environment, but also develop the confidence and adaptability to achieve my future goals. From engaging with faculty to developing technological proficiencies in industry software, I am extremely grateful for my time at Marist, as it transformed me from an ambitious student into a competent career professional.

During my four years at Marist, I was presented with valuable opportunities that deeply impacted both my personal and professional development. I had the chance to study abroad, complete an internship, and conduct research. Marist University fostered an environment that not only encouraged my academic exploration but also nurtured a deep passion for learning. Marist equipped me with all the necessary resources to grow both personally and professionally, and I am well prepared for PA school.

I am incredibly grateful for my time at Marist and how it contributed to my personal and professional development. Participation in cross-disciplinary experiences made me a well-rounded candidate for competitive law schools, and my professors were more than educators, they were mentors. My relationships with the faculty were instrumental in developing my professional identity and increasing my confidence. Marist allowed me to learn beyond the classroom through lots of extracurricular activities, on-campus jobs, research opportunities, community involvement, and resources that aligned with my interests and goals. Marist encouraged me and challenged me to channel my potential and follow my passions.
